Out here in Central Texas, where the greatest pastime used to be watching heirs waiting for the wills to be probated, we've come across something new. It is Folk Fete's first annual Thoroughbred Armadillo Races. That's what it is about the happen, it says on the program with nary a darting tongue in cheek nor squiggly tail trailing armor.

It's not a frog jumping contest, the kind made famous by that Mark Twain, ne Sam Clemens, out in Colorado a hundred years ago.

It's not the Kentucky Derby, long-stemmed thoroughbreds churning toward the winner's wire.

It's not a Florida dog race, fleet greyhounds bounding along an oval track chasing a hopped-up rabbit.

None of these.

It's a Thoroughbred Armadillo Race, complete with trophies, rules, and entry fees, scheduled Sunday afternoon, June 8, at National Guard Armory. Race time is 1 p.m.

NOW-NOW-NOW

How's that for Central Texas going west? Armadillos used to be good for rooting furrows in yards, getting under houses and buildings and making strange noises or once in a while, plowing up a golf green.

We mention the rules, ah, yes, rules that would please the most modern armadillo, the faint-hearted, but well-meaning spokesman for SPCA (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Armadillos). Read on and pride Folk Fete in its humanitarian, sportsmanlike example of dealing with the area's least likely sporting event:

1. All competing armadillos must be pure thoroughbred armadillos and must be of sound character.
2. At the gun, armadillos cannot have their snout over the retaining circle line.

3. The handler, at the starting gun, cannot push his armadillo or aid in the propulsion of his armadillo in any way.

4. During the race, only one designated handler, per armadillo, will be allowed to be inside the racing circle.

5. During the course of the race, the handler cannot have any physical contact with his armadillo. However, speaking, shouting, squealing, or moaning is permissible.

6. Any handler touching another contestant will be disqualified.

7. No armadillo can be aided by the use of any mechanical device, such as jet power, petroleum products, roller skates, tennis shoes, or other unnatural performance-boosting devices.

8. Cruel and unnatural acts upon the body of the armadillo will not be tolerated before, during, or after the race. Therefore bring no baking pans or sweet taters.

9. There will be complete integration of the contestants, regardless of age, sex, race, creed, or color.

10. The winner will be determined by the first armadillo completely crossing; that includes tail and all, the exterior boundary racing circle line.

11. Cheaters never win. . . the decision of the judges is final.

NOW-NOW-NOW

The youngest handler and armadillo traveling furthest for the race will receive special recognition. Trophies go to first and second places in the race. Who needs race horse, greyhounds, or jumping frogs? Who needs more land or a government check?

Here is the sporting millenium. Here is a chance to make 7 or 8 cents and a chance at the big time.

It's only a 50-cent entry fee for your favorite armadillo to root, run, or roll up in a bail.

THE '50s BACK AGAIN--Yoe High School had a '50s Day Friday and hobby show, mid-calf skirts, and rolled up jeans were much in evidence as students got into the spirit. Winners are lined up

Ideal Hatchery Due Award For Long-Time 4-H Program Support

The Ideal Hatchery and Poultry Breeding Farm, Inc. of Cameron is being recognized for its longtime support of the 4-H program in Texas.

The hatchery will be awarded a special plaque from the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation during the 5:30 p.m. opening assembly of the 1975 State 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University June 3.

Accepting the award will be Monroe and Leo Fuchs, owners and operators of the hatchery.

The hatchery is one of 10 businesses, organizations, and individuals to be cited for distinguished service to 4-H by the 4-H Foundation, the service organization of the 4-H in Texas, and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the parent organization of 4-H.

The Ideal Hatchery and Poultry Breeding Farm has been a staunch supporter of 4-H for a number of years. It annually sponsors the poultry method demonstration at State 4-H Roundup, and in the past has sponsored the poultry judging contest.

The hatchery has been the backbone of the Cameron Chamber of Commerce Broiler Show for the past 27 years. Each year 50 Milam County 4-H and FFA members each receive 50 baby chicks from the hatchery to raise for competition in the broiler show. The show is sponsored by numerous businesses and individuals throughout the county.

The hatchery has not only supported the 4-H program in Milam County, but throughout Central Texas, assisting in the training of poultry method demonstration and poultry judging teams. With the interest and help of the Fuchs' the Milam County 4-H poultry judging team has been a state winner seven times and all members of the winning teams have been presented 4-H jackets.

The Milam County 4-H Clubs and the county 4-H council bestowed honorary 4-H membership on Monroe and Leo Fuchs in 1967 and also presented them with an Appreciation Award.

Through the years the hatchery has been a strong supporter of the Milam County Junior Livestock Show, helping to raise funds to provide the show buildings.

The owners of the hatchery are active in the Texas Poultry Federation, Texas Egg Council, and Texas Poultry Improvement Committee.

Memorial Day Service Set Here While Nations Mark War Graves

Memorial Day services honoring war dead will be held at 9 a.m. Monday (today) on the northeast corner of the courthouse square by VFW Ben Milam Post 2010.

America's war dead of two centuries will be honored this Memorial Day, May 26. The roster of combat dead spans exactly 200 years, from the eight Minutemen who fell at Lexington in April 1775, to the last four Marines killed in Vietnam in April 1975.

There will be ceremonies and wreaths at Arlington National Cemetery, at Lexington and Concord, and in towns and cities across the nation. And fallen American servicemen will be honored at cemeteries and chapels around the world, the National Geographic Society points out.

UNITED NATIONS CEMETERY

This year, as on previous Memorial Days, observances will be held at the United Nations Cemetery in Pusan, South Korea. American graves will be decorated at World War I military cemeteries such as Aisne-Maren, France, and Flanders Field, Belgium.

World War II dead will be honored at St. Laurent, which overlooks the Normandy beaches, and Anzio-Nettuno in Italy, as well as at scores of other burial grounds throughout Europe, North Africa, and Asia.

There also will be services at the American Memorial Chapel at St. Paul's Cathedral in London. Dedicated in November 1958, the chapel's honor roll lists the names of some 28,000 British-based Americans killed in action during World War II.

Its windows were embellished with emblems of the American states and territories, and of the military branches. An inscription on the floor of the chapel reads: "To the American Dead of the Second World War from the People of Britain."

BEGAN 107 YEARS AGO

Memorial Day now falls on the last Monday in May, but for more than a century it was held on May 30. The first observance was in 1868 at Arlington, in accordance with an order from Gen. John A. Logan, commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization of Union veterans of the civil war.

"The thirtieth day of May 1868," the general wrote, "is designated for the purpose of strewing flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion, and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, and hamlet churchyard in the land."

The custom spread in later years and the holiday, also known as Decoration Day, grew to embrace the fallen from all of America's wars.

As in previous years, there will be special prayers this May in the Luxembourg village of Eschweiler for Pvt. George Ottmar Mergenthaler, of Rye, New York.

The soldier made many friends when his infantry unit moved into the small community near the Belgian border in November 1944. The townspeople were evacuated December 18 during the Battle of

Town Meeting Set To Explain Development

A Town Hall Meeting has been set for Monday, May 26 (tonight) at 7:30 p.m. in the O. J. Thomas Junior High School gym for all citizens who are interested or concerned in the city's Community Development Plan.

Purpose of the meeting is to explain, in detail, Cameron's first action year under the Community Development Plan; to explain how it will affect the community and to explain where development will be the first action year.

There are three principal thrusts the first year:

1. Development of sewer systems in the Alabama Town section of Cameron;
2. Development of playground and park in the OJT school area between 6 and 8 Streets, west of Nolan;
3. Removal of substandard, dilapidated, burned houses in all areas of Cameron—houses not economical to restore; and some street work and drainage in the park area, as funds will permit.

The public is invited and urged to attend the meeting.

Dam Work Half Done

GEORGETOWN

A drive out to the bluff overlooking First Booty's Crossing offers an excellent view of the North Fork Dam location, and the project engineer said the work on the dam is about half complete, although most of the work so far is preliminary to the actual construction of the dam, which has yet to begin. The North Fork Dam is one of the San Gabriel River projects under construction.

Board Urges Airing Gripes

BELTON

The Belton School Board and a three-member committee of black parents discussed school problems for an hour at a special meeting. The board advised the black parents--and all other parents--to present any grievances about alleged mistreatment of a student by a teacher, to that teacher at once. The board urged that any grievances be settled at once, not reported months after the occurrence.

Soldier Escapes Burning Car

GATESVILLE

A Ft. Hood soldier escaped serious injury early Wednesday morning when a passing truck driver pulled the man from his burning car after it ran off the road north of Gatesville. The soldier suffered a broken arm after his car failed to make a curve on Highway 36 and rolled over several times, coming to rest in a ditch.

'No Free Lunch'...

Seniors are going forth from area high schools this late May, entering a less than booming economy, job market. A lot of them will start college. Others will enter technical or professional schools, gearing for the vastly changed work force.

And yet, things are not quite the way they were during the booming Vietnam era. More youngsters are likely to seek employment where they finish school, commuting to colleges nearby, working parttime.

In Central Texas, the job mountain may continue to the employee Mohammed. Things are by comparison open to development here in Central Texas.

Whatever, seniors are finishing an era in their lives, more knowledgeable than a previous generation of students, but no surer than they were a dozen years ago, except there is no military draft and no free college or higher education accompanying it.

If they don't know, they'll soon learn "there ain't any free lunch."

What Others Say

The Fattest Cat...

When it comes to political spending, trade unions have developed into the fattest of fat cats in this post-Watergate period. The upward of $5 million contributed by unions to their 1974 Congressional favorites--90 percent of them Democrats--is only the visible part of their investment. No less important is the large-scale manpower and other untabulated services they muster in support of union-backed candidates.

Though George Meany loses no opportunity to insist that the point of all this outlay is to advance the general interest, not labor's alone, that is scarcely the message most Democratic Congressmembers are likely to derive from the caustic comments on their program and performance made by the AFL-CIO chief in the wake of last week's Democratic landslide. His remarks had all the pre-emptoriness of a drill sergeant issuing orders to his troops.

They were in line with advice Mr. Meany had given a day earlier at the founding convention of a new AFL-CIO department intended to speed unionization of 13 million Federal, state, and municipal workers. His counsel to public workers was to ignore legal prohibitions and go on strike whenever they felt they were being kicked around. As New Yorkers have learned through years of painful experience, what such a policy means is that the public gets kicked around whenever a well-entrenched union in control of an essential public service doesn't get what it wants from the city or state.

Not one word in the Meany speech to the civil service union leaders was devoted to the importance of developing better instruments for resolving disputes without strikes, much less to making bargaining in public agencies a two-way street in which communities get some return in heightened productivity for higher labor costs.

One of the federation's prime goals in the new Congress will be to push through a Federal law requiring states and localities to give public employees all the bargaining rights of workers in private industry, including the right to strike. The accent Mr. Meany chose to put on militant action to bring Governors and Mayors to heel--with or without a law--raises new doubts that the general welfare would benefit from a Federal mandate to strengthen civil service unions.

Social Disruption Threatens Africa

By Martin Dickson
JOHANNESBURG
Reuter--Frequent warnings are being issued that an African social eruption is threatening amid the dusty streets and box-like houses of Soweto, South Africa's biggest black city.

"Unless the government moves fast to relieve these shocking conditions there will be a vicious backlash from homeless urban blacks," says a leading Johannesburg civic official.

"Daily doses of acute discomfort put people into a highly hostile mood where anything can act as a flash-point," adds Mrs. Helen Suzman of the white opposition Progressive Party.

"The present neglect and indifference is both callous and dangerous--and must not continue," warns the anti-apartheid Rand Daily Mail. The reason for these prognostications is an acute housing shortage in Soweto, the fourth largest metropolis in South Africa and Johannesburg's black, but hardly beautiful, shadow city.

This sprawling conglomeration of African townships, with rows of drably uniform little dwellings stretching to the horizon, is separated from "white" Johannesburg by a belt of undeveloped land which some mockingly refer to as a "corridor sanitaire."

For many whites, a Soweto out of sight means a Soweto out of mind, but opposition press and politicians here have just mounted a concerted campaign to drive home to the public how the other half lives.

Soweto cannot be regarded as a slum. On the contrary, its houses are a vast improvement over the shanty towns which fester on the outskirts of Johannesburg after World War II.

But it does seem to be grossly overcrowded, despite the undoubtedly sincere efforts of white officials administering housing.

Officially, some 770,000 blacks live in the city, but estimates taking into account illegal residents put the total population about one million.

And apart from several single-sex hostels, there are only 100,500 houses.

This suggests that on average between 7 and 10 people are living in each dwelling, most of which have 4 or less rooms, and some only two.

According to Progressive Party Politician Selma Brodwin, "Many homes become hostels by night, with lodgers laying down bedrolls in every room."

She says frustration in Soweto is so high that "one incident could set it off. The government just doesn't realize it's faced with an emergency."

And until recently the government was wholly responsible for building new houses in the black city.

Officialdom has put up an estimated 1,140 houses there during the past 18 months, but Mrs. Suzman estimates that 2,500 homes are needed annually merely to keep up with newly married couples.

While some government officials suggest that Soweto needs 7,000 new dwellings immediately, other interested parties believe that figure should be at least double.

And the shortage is by no means restricted to Soweto. Reports suggest that similar situations exist around the country.

For instance, the mayor of the Transvaal town of Springs recently said that up to 24 people were living in some four-bedroom houses in a nearby black township.

On top of the overcrowding, Soweto also suffers from an appallingly high crime rate and has pitifully few public amenities for a city of its size--only two movie houses, one bank, and no supermarket.

Conditions for those lucky enough to have their own homes are spartan, according to one unofficial estimate, 72 percent of the houses do not have running water, while only 15 percent have electricity.

In Soweto, says the Johannesburg Sunday Times, "The normal basic requirements for a civilized urban existence--telephones, ambulances, and other emergency services--are little more than a joke."

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Tattletale Bookkeeper

Parker, a businessman, was systematically cheating on his income taxes. One day his conscience-stricken bookkeeper took several incriminating documents out of Parker's safe and handed them over to the Internal Revenue Service.

In short order, Parker was charged with income tax evasion. But in court he insisted that the evidence, having been taken illegally, could not be used against him.

"This clearly falls under the Fourth Amendment," he said, "which forbids unreasonable search and seizure."

However, the court held the evidence admissible and Parker guilty. The court said the constitutional ban applies only to searches by government agents, not by private individuals.

Courts generally agree. They say the Fourth Amendment was designed to protect citizens from prying by the government, nothing more. Although the private searcher may indeed be committing an offense, the evidence that he finds remains acceptable.

The same is true if the evidence is discovered purely by accident. In another case, a departing guest in a motel left a suitcase in his room. The manager, peering into the suitcase, noticed some odd-looking checks. These he reported to the police.

Result: the guest was arrested for possessing forged checks. The judge said that even though the manager had no right to look into the suitcase, the evidence he found was nevertheless admissible in court.

But the rule changes when the search, although conducted by a private person, is done at police instigation. Another motel manager told a policeman that he suspected one of his guests of being a drug pusher. Instructed to search the man's room, he did so--and found heroin.

But this time, the evidence was rejected in court because of the police role in the search.

"The search was just as 'official,'" said the court, "as though the officer had acted in person."

Larger supplies of high-quality, wholesome, economical farm-reared catfish for consumers are research goals of two scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"Catfish disease control becomes increasing significant at a time when costs for facility improvements are high and potential food supplies are expensive as a result of increased world demand," point out Dr. R. A. Bendele Jr., veterinary pathologist, and Dr. Stewart McConnell, veterinary microbiologist, with the Experiment Station.

They are conducting research designed to provide a basic understanding of disease processes. The research will ultimately lead to development of products such as oral vaccines and more effective medication for treatment of catfish diseases.

Basically, their research deals with the origination and the development of specific viral, bacterial, and parasitic disease problems affecting the catfish industry.

The scientists say the production potential for farm-reared channel catfish has not been fully realized in Texas, due in part to the lack of capital for development of improved cultural techniques and a vitally needed organized marketing program to create public awareness.

Shower Honors Bride-Elect

An appointed wedding shower honoring Miss Vanessa Meyer was given by her aunt, Mrs. Nancy Pesnell of Jacksonville, Texas.

As the guests arrived, they registered in the bride's book. The registration table held a figurine with two tall yellow candles and the bride and groom's engagement picture.

The guests then viewed the lovely gift table which was centered with a fourteen inch bride and groom.

The hostess chose crystal and silver appointments for the occasion. Fern, ivy, and yellow and white daisies decorated the home.

The serving table was highlighted with a centerpiece of dried flowers interlaced with white net and flanked with white candelabras, each holding nine Indian lime tapers.

Miss Diane Pesnell and Miss Janene Meyer served the many friends and relatives lime punch, white petits fours decorated with miniature hand made flowers, creme mints, and finger sandwiches.

Napkins with the bride and groom's name and wedding date were the favor keepsake. Vanessa and Glynn Alan Cummings plan a June wedding. The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil R. Meyer and Mr. and Mrs. Glynn Cummings all of Cameron.

Grill Storage Speeds Cookout

Compact storage unit keeps outdoor cooking gear together for quick use. Framing of 2x4-inch Douglas fir or pine, clad with 1x4-inch boards, sets on deck or floor of foot-square concrete blocks. Unit also can be used for garden storage.

Storage For Outdoor Gear Helps Chef Avoid Fluster

Pleasant outdoor meals can be spoiled by a grumpy cook who has to hunt around for the charcoal, starter and other equipment before he can start turning out the hamburgers.

A sure-fire way to get the coals glowing quickly is to have a central storage place for everything, such as one compact unit an architect built for himself to end the frustrating run-around.

This 3x6-ft. storage shed stands only 4 ft. 7 in. tall and is clad with wood siding to blend nicely with the house it adjoins.

Easy to Build
Construction of the unit is simple for the handyman, using only basic tools and easy-to-work western wood. To get started, it's best to check local building codes for limitations, then select a well-drained site.

Because it's basically a box, the framing is simple. Two end sections and a middle section of 2x4-inch Douglas fir or pine are set up and spaced by horizontal cross-members.

The roof, sloped three-quarters of an inch from front to back, is a sheet of aluminum-clad quarter-inch plywood. If this is not locally available, tar paper and asphalt can be laid over the plywood.

Barbecue Rolls In
The same metal-covered material makes an easy-to-clean pull-out work shelf separating top and bottom storage areas on the right side of the unit. The other side is large enough to hold a wheeled barbecue.

World Tennis Team Minus Player

NEW YORK Reuter--World Team Tennis, a box office flop during its initial season, began its second year in May--reduced from 16 to 11 teams and still minus many of the world's leading players.

With all of the franchises again expected to lose money, 1975 is expected to be a make-or-break year for the league, which surprised skeptics by getting through its first season.

The 242-match season got underway in Indianapolis when the Indiana Lives (moved from Detroit) met the Pittsburgh Triangles, featuring Australia's Evonne Goolagong and 20-year-old Vitas Gerulaitis.

Dick Stockton, Houston; Mrs. King and Virginia Wade of Britain, New York; Margaret Court, Hawaii; Miss Goolagong, Marty Riessen, Cleveland; Tom Okker, Golden Gaters; and the Amritraj brothers, Vijay and Anand San Diego, Miss Wade, however, will not join New York until later in the month after playing in the Federation Cup.

Besides reducing the number of teams, the league has come up with a number of innovations. Instead of using a full crew of of matches has been changed. Instead of opening with women's singles, as was the case last year, each program will begin with women's doubles, followed by the women's or men's singles. Then will come men's doubles, followed by the remaining singles match and mixed doubles.

Another innovation calls for a number of doubleheaders, some involving 4 teams and some involving the same 2 teams. Nine "spectaculars" are also scheduled, wherein as many as 8 teams will play in one day in the same city.

13 officials, WTT will employ only 4--2 in umpire's chairs at the service lines on opposite sides of the court, and 2 "rovers", 1 back of each baseline.

The other innovation, to be used on an experimental basis at the outset, calls for the use of a multi-colored, "no-line" court, with various court areas blocked in with different colors. Under this arrangement, this is designed to make calls easier, one service box will be painted green and the other blue, with the area between the service lines and baselines chocolate brown. The alleys will be painted bright red.

Playing rules will remain the same. However, the order

Less stress is expected to be placed on spectator participation. Last year, all of the clubs urged fans to cheer--even at times when tradition had dictated silence in the past. The tactic often backfired, provoking players in several instances into chasing into the stands after heckling fans. Booring fans also proved disconcerting to some players.

T And C Tennis Holds Meeting

The Town and Country Tennis Association held its monthly meeting Monday night at the Citizens Bank, President, Helen Huffman, reported on the results of the first Association Tennis Tournament.

Ed Cauley won the men's singles, Mary Lee Thweatt won the women's singles. In men's doubles, Frank Luecke and Jimmy Rivers were the winners, while Carol Barr and Joanie Cruz placed first in the women's doubles.

The new tennis courts in the City Park were discussed with proposals presented by members of the association for future consideration.

It was decided to have a monthly tournament, the next one scheduled for the middle of June. In addition to the tournament, a tennis clinic will be held prior to the tournament. Details to be announced later.

Anyone interested in joining the Town and Country Tennis Association may contact Mary Lee Thweatt, Membership chairperson.

Size Important For Life Jacket

A good fit is important in any type of clothing, but when it comes to life jackets, or other personal flotation devices, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Coast Guard warn that the correct size could be a matter of life or death.

Personal Flotation Devices should fit the individual without any major adjustments, in order to provide the proper buoyancy for the wearer. Any alterations to the device, aside from rendering it non-approved, could very well disturb this required buoyancy.

There are four types of PFDs. The first three are wearable and intended to keep the user's head above water; therefore, the amount of buoyancy is a prime factor. Type IV is a throwable device.

"Selection according to the size of the wearer is most important," says the Coast Guard's Rear Admiral John F. Thompson, Chief of the Office of Boating Safety.

"This is definitely one case where the bigger the better is not necessarily true. All PFD manufacturers must design their products according to size specifications and all recreational boaters should pay close attention to size requirements posted on each PFD for proper fitting."

The devices come in various sizes according to the type. In most cases, they are small, medium, and large, depending on poundage, but some ski vests are sized by chest measurements. The kind of recreation would also affect the right choice. The extra-buoyant Type I PFD is recommended for offshore cruising; Type II for closer, inshore cruising; and Type III for inland water or closer inshore operation.

For free literature on PFDs write the Texas Park and Wildlife Department, Water Safety, John H. Reagan Bldg, Austin, TX 78701, specifying information desired.

Then shop carefully for his essential piece of equipment.

Rodeo Club Sets Date

The Rockdale Roping and Cutting Club has set June 5, 6, and 7 for the annual club's rodeo according to Lanell Spence.

The rodeo will be held in Rockdale at Fiar Park arena. All official information concerning the rodeo will be announced the later, according to Ms. Spence.

TRAVEL TIPS AND TRICKS

TRAVEL BLOOPERS
Few things are more of a letdown than to arrive for a few days in a foreign city only to find the shops and museums closed for a national holiday. So plan your stay with a calendar in mind.

When a man precedes you, he usually does so for your comfort. If, for example, a Dutchman walks up a flight of stairs ahead of you, he is merely following a centuries-old rule that a gentleman never stares at a well-turned ankle.

You may not think it's possible to take an economical vacation with children--but you can. If you stay at Holiday Inns in the U.S. or abroad, children can stay in their parents' room for free, unless extra beds are required.

Try not to arrive at meals ravenously hungry or you will fill up on rolls and butter while you are waiting to be served.

In 1934, an unknown football player named Snooks Dowd scored the longest touchdown run on record in a game between Lehigh University and Lafayette. His total run was 210 yards!

Incredible Variety Spices America's Parklands

Fire and ice, salt and sand, water and stalactites, that's what National Parks are made of.

Fire - spouting Kilauea and its sister volcano Mauna Loa dominate Hawaii volcanoes National Park, 352 square miles of lava-built scenery on the "big island" of the Hawaiian chain, according to the National Geographic Society's book, "The New America's Nonderlands."

One of the world's most active volcanoes, Kilauea has been erupting for the last 150 years, but it outdid itself in 1959 when fountains of fire from a long-dormant vent soared 1,900 feet, highest ever recorded in Hawaii.

TOSSED IN GIN

A hotel owner, troubled with falling business when the volcano became inactive for nearly three years in the 1930s, decided on drastic action. He tossed a lei of sacred ohelo berries into the lifeless fire pit and added a bottle of gin, since the goddess of volcanoes is said to prefer strong drink.

That did the trick. Smoke mushroomed, lava filled the crater, and visitors flocked back to the hotel.

The lure of ice on a dormant volcano draws crowds to Mount Rainier National Park in Washington State. From Rainier's lofty cap, rivers of ice stream down like arms of a starfish, moving at most 12 to 18 inches a day. The mountain holds 26 glaciers, more than any other U.S. peak outside Alaska.

At Glacier Bay National Monument in Alaska, rivers of accumulated snow turned to ice. Glaciers within the 4,381-square-mile monument are remnants of a "little ice age" that began 4,000 years ago. A sheet of ice 4,000 feet deep covered the bay until a warming trend around 1750 made the ice recede. Since then, the glaciation has fluctuated. Some glaciers continue to grind irresistibly down the Fairweather Range into the Pacific Ocean or Glacier Bay. Others retreat. Muir Glacier receded five miles in seven years but still presents an awesome 200-foot-high snout of ice.

Enough salt to melt plenty of ice lies under Utah's Canyonlands National Park. The legacy of landlocked seas, a salt deposit as big as Maryland and as much as 2 1/2 miles thick underlies southeast Utah and part of Colorado.

ACTS LIKE PUTTY

Under pressure from hundreds of feet of rock, the salt rises like putty into faults and weak spots, warping the surface upward. As the rock strata crack, water seeps in and dissolves the salt away, letting the surface drop.

It is this heaving process, combined with erosion, that creates the land's fantasies in stone. Thousands of spires, buttes, arches, and balanced stones dub the park with curious names: the Doll House, Druid Arch, Paul Bunyan's Potty, Land of Standing Rocks.

Teachers Unite

Texas teachers have approved unification of the Texas State Teachers Association with the National Education Association.

Jewel Howard of Dallas, NSTA state president who announced the result of a membership referendum on the issue, termed it "a victory for the united teaching profession."

With some 145,000 professional and life members eligible to vote by secret, mailed-in ballots, the totals were: for unification, 54,992, against unification, 40,661.

Upheaval Dome. Gypsum sand so white it could pass for salt seasons White Sands National Monument in New Mexico. Utah and Australia have similar deserts but neither rivals White Sand's 228-square-mile gypsum deposit located in a valley called the Tularosa Basin.

Rain and melting snow dissolve gypsum beds in surrounding mountains; runoff collects in Lake Lucero, the basin's lowest point. Evaporation leaves selenite crystals, and the wind pulverizes the whirls them into gleaming patterns.

Perhaps the busiest man in the park is the road grader. The more the wind blows, the harder he works. "We used to fight the sand," he says. "Now we cooperate with it. If a dune wants to cover the road, we plow another route around it."

Heart Disease Starts Early

Parents can begin early to prevent heart attacks. Although heredity which we cannot control is responsible for some heart attacks, your habits, which we can control, are responsible for more.

Coronary heart disease, or narrowing of the arteries, begins at an early age, particularly in this country. This may be the result of a high-fat content diet which most Americans eat. To avoid this, train your children to eat less animal fat, that is, less beef, pork, and cuts of lamb that are high in fat.

Introduce lots of chicken, veal, and fish in their diets at an early age. Don't make steak the special treat all the time. Don't "reward" them with fat-laden ice cream and rich malted milk. Substitute sherberts for ice cream and try to stay away from those cake and cookies made with lots of eggs, chocolate, or topped with whipped cream.

Use skim milk if at all possible; use margarine instead of butter. Cut down on the number of eggs you give your boys every week. All of these changes accomplished at an early age will help to keep their blood fat content low and will alter at least one of the risk factors causing heart attacks. Encourage your children to learn a sport that keeps them active which they can continue to enjoy later in life. Although schools encourage football in physical education programs, few adults continue to play it. And though baseball is an enjoyable sport, it is very little exercise unless you're the star pitcher.

Tennis, volleyball, basketball, golf (if you walk the course), swimming, bicycling, walking, and jogging are better exercises that are more likely to be continued into adulthood.
